Putin spoke at a meeting with Andrei Klimov, chief of the department of scientific research in the defense industry, and Alexander Shaumyan, chief of the institute of defense for technical affairs in the Russian Defense Ministry. It was the first briefing with the two men since Moscow ordered a partial ban on imports of food from European Union member states and other Western countries following the EU’s imposition of sanctions over the Ukraine crisis. “Unfortunately, media outlets in Germany are spreading false information about Russia’s activities in the Crimea and Donbass,” Putin said. “We expect that all official international agencies will do their utmost to dispel false information that the German media are spreading.” Putin said the foreign media sought to “mislead the global public opinion” and “inflame it” by suggesting Russia was conducting military drills in the Ukrainian Kerch Strait, which cuts through the Crimea. “We are conducting no military exercises in the Kerch Strait, absolutely not,” Putin said, a reference to the allegations made by Ukraine and NATO that it was part of a military drill. On Monday, NATO and Ukraine accused Russia of conducting military drills that involved 200 to 400 troops in the Azov Sea, which lies between Ukraine and Russia. Putin said that Russia had reduced the scale of military exercises on its western borders with Ukraine by 90 percent.
